

Common Interview Mistakes that Candidates make during Interview

Common Interview Mistakes

It is easy to make a mistake as sometime we don't know that we are doing mistake but in the some way we make a mistake that leads us in great problem. The mistakes we do at the time of interview greatly affect our career planning.

Some people wonder what mistakes they did and why they failed to get a particular job. Fact is that most of the time the reasons are simple that most people think. Here we are going to tell you the some common mistakes which are made by the candidates during Interview.

Some Common Mistakes That Candidates Make During Interview

Make your First Impression

As it has been said that the first impression is the last impression so the candidate who is going for a interview should be polite and well dressed in a formal dress as this mistake is mainly done by the candidates.

Not Researched about Company:

In general way, appliers have to do home work about the company. Here home work means that candidates must have investigate about the organization, their working, its market position and other important key points. This shows that the applicants are serious about the job.

Avoid Being Rude

Candidates should make the interviewer feel that you are eager to get a job and out of the many applicants you are the one who want the job most. Do not act so relaxed and unworried that you have not much requirement of job.

Other than being relaxed, avoid being rude. Show politeness in your conversation with the interviewer. To be too excited or rude in presenting your view so as it makes a negative impact on the employer.

Avoid saying too little/too much

Communication gap which takes place between the interviewer and candidate is that when the question is asked from the candidate, he/she should not hesitate while answering. One should feel confident while answering the question. Candidates must give the answer in the proper, logical and short way.

Ignoring signal from the interviewer

Candidates must listen and understand to the interviewers very carefully that what they want to tell. Throughout the conversation, interviewers may provide valuable clues/ signals as to what they are appearing for in candidates, allowing you to adapt your answers to their requirements.

Be Confident:

Many candidates lack the confidence level. Employers want their employees who can stand up with their own feet and can represent the name of the company. This is the reason why most employers look for applicants who have what it takes.

Being Confident does not mean that you neglect the interviewer talks. Listen to the interviewer carefully and present your points or answers in a logical way.

Failing to take the opportunity to ask questions

Usually after the interview starts to wind down interviewer asks the candidate if he or she has any questions. It is in your best interest to ask questions and clear your doubts about the job —not asking any can make you appear as though you are not too interested in the position.

It doesn't take a lot of time to prepare for your next interview but it takes a lot of time to get an interview in first place. So while going for interview candidate should keep all these points in mind only then we will be able to clear the interview.

We wish ALL THE BEST to the candidates who are going to appear for a job interview.
